++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Slowly becoming more settled and milder.

Today:
Many parts dry with broken cloud and sunny spells, though a few showers possible across southeast England. Outbreaks of rain and drizzle edging into western parts with low cloud and mist on coasts and hills.

Tonight:
Tonight patchy rain, drizzle and low cloud spreading eastwards across most parts of the UK. Clearer skies reaching the far northwest later.

Tuesday:
Low cloud with some rain and drizzle affecting many areas, though some brightness in the south. Sunnier skies in the northwest extending to many parts later. Feeling warm in sunshine.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Initially settled and mild, although some showers possible in the south-east. Turning cloudier in the north, and colder in the south where chance of rain and showers, possibly even wintry.
